S. P. FOLDER SHOWS BEAUTIES OF STATE

Something of California's sunshine and natural beauty has been infused in the latest travel circulars issued by the Southern Pacific Company. Within bright and attractive covers, on which are depicted typical scenets of the Golden West, is a wealth of valuable information for the tourist and holiday-maker supplemented by splendid illustrations.

The joy of the open in the land of sunshine is graphically protrayed in its every phase, from the attractions of the mountains and valleys to those of the sea shore. The great industrial centers of the west are also initmately described by pen and picture. The circulars are of particular value to fair visitors, affording a reliable guide to hundreds of points of interest throughout the state; what can be seen in each place, and the quickest way to get there.

California beach resorts, the Tahoe country, the southern Shasta route, the westbound Ogden route and the westbound Sunset route are each the subject of a seperate circular.

SAN LEANDRO YOUTHS TO SHOW GARDEN TRUCK

Fruits and vegetables grown by 250 San Leandro boys and girls will form the exhibit at a show to be held in San Leandro next month. Following closely upon the successful flower show, the horticultural display will, say gardnerers, emphasize this city's enterprise in gardening.

"The educational value of such a show is great. San Leandro appears to be a shining example and a leader in the school garden work, nature [illegible] which is [illegible] importance that it deserves state recognition," comments A. R. Golud an expert English horticulturist of Hayward. The children planted and are tending vegetables and fruit in their own plots of ground.

The Niles Bridge Club held one of its usual pleasant gatherings on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. B. Tyson, with Mrs. Elvin Meyer as hostess. CHURCHES MAY COLLECT

Churches are premitted to charge admission for bazaars and entertainments and still remain exempt from taxation under Assemblyman Rominger's constitutional amendment adopted by the senate Tuesday. It will be submitted to a vote of the people at the next general election.

"Too much property exemption from taxation," said Strobrodge opposing the measure. "Property in Alameda county amounting to $100,000,000 is exmpted from taxation. This is going too far."

Protection for San Francisco's Hetch Hetchy project against a hold-up by any towns or territory through which its aqueduct may run is provided in a bill by Assemblyman Ryan that was passed. The measure is designed to prevent a recurrence of trouble which Los Angeles encountered in its Owens river supply.

WASTE IN EXHIBIT FUND IS DENIED

A. A. Denison, in charge of the Alameda county exhibit at the exposition, explained before a special executive session of the board of supervisors Tuesday afternoon wherein the county was getting value received out of the money that has been spent on the exhibit thus far, and that although Alameda county has the largest exhibit in the California building there is no more help employed there than by the other counties..

Salaries of lecturers and attendants, Denison said, are as low as the lowest of other counties exhbiting. The supervisors admitted Denison's contention that the public was being led to believe that the Panama-Pacific exposition exhibit was responsible alone for the expenditures made on all exhibits the county has, whereas it is responsible for but a part and the San Diego exhibit costs a good percentage of the total spent. The supervisors agreed to visit the California building en banc at an early date, to investigate personally and pass upon the situation.

Denison's explanitory talk was occasioned by the action of the board last Thursday when it was recommended strongly that D. H. Bradley and Newton Drury, lecturers, be dropped from the exposition commission payroll and that the salary of Dennison be reduced. Statistics show that Alameda county's payroll at the exposition is $1044 monthly, that the commission payroll in Alameda county is $550 and in San Diego more than $400, making an approximate total of $2094 a month.

The other will prohibit the making and selling of wine, effective January 1, 1920.

Congressman Charles H. Randall of Los Angeles county, the first Prohibitioninst elected to office, has asked the State Horticultural Commission to investigate other uses than wine-making that wine grapes may be put to.

DAIRYMEN OPPOSE PURE MILK BILL

That dollars are going to count more than the lives of babies in the fight on the Shearer pure milk bill was forecasted today when the measure came up for final passage. In face of opposition, Shearer allowed the bill to go over.

Senator Candler said he had received a letter from a Danish dairyman in Fresno county saying the Shearer bill would compel an added expense of $9000 annually insuring milk against disease germs. Senator Strobridge and Rush each announced that their constituents were against the measure.

The Shearer bill would compel dairymen to either guarantee either milk or cream is from non-tubercular cows or that it has been pasteurized, thereby destroying disease germs. Nathan Strauss, the millionaire New York crusader, addreaaed the legislature on the subject and women's clubs and health organizations throughout the state have been advocating the measure.

Dairymen oppose it because of increased expense made necessary in serving pure milk. Friends of the pure milk crusade will be called upon to make a fight for the bill, which was later referred to the finance committee, where it is in danger of being allowed to "die" because an appropriation is asked to carry it into effect.

The Governor's Lady

SYNOPSIS.

Daniel Slade suddenly advances from a penniless miner to a millionaire and becomes a power in the political and business world. He has his eye on the governor's chair. His simple, home-loving wife fails to rise to the new conditions. Slade meets Katherine, daughter of Senator Strickland, and sees in her all that Mary is not.

"Oh, I like Washington," she said, bringing herself back to the conversation with difficulty.

Her father, noticing her abstraction, remarked indulgently: "She likes Washington, Slade. She likes the East, but she doesn't tell it to everybody on account of father's votes. Now, Slade and I love our western city, eh, Slade?"

"Ah!" Katherine exclaimed, now thoroughly herself again. "There's a man for you! He's not going to let a town stand in his way. Mr. Slade, this is father's Waterloo. He's been a great disappointment to me. That's the worst of parents. We children never know how they're going to turn out. If father had only listened to me it would have been Washington for him—Washington for me. But he wouldn't cross the Delaware. He wouldn't leave the West. If there'd only been a drop of Napoleon in father," she concluded with a sudden burst of vehemence.

"Napoleon!" repeated the senator.

"Yes, Napoleon. He got what he wanted, and nothing ever stood in his path. I just love the way he rode over poor old Josephine's heart, don't you?"—and she turned to Slade.

"But he was right!" she continued, earnestly, as if she were making a plea for something that lay very close to her own heart. "Why should we let anyone hold us back? I wouldn't. But mother didn't want to leave the West, so father stuck to his town and his friends and his state. Now he stands in the background and boosts other men politically.

"He wants to boost you," she added, suddenly.

"Letting out secrets," her father accused, playfully.

But Katherine was never more [illegible] persisted.

"You're a lucky man, senator," Slade broke in, as he watched Katherine admiringly. "You're a lucky man to have a charming young woman behind you in the race."

"That's all we women are for," answered Katherine, bitterly, "standing behind some man and watching him do things."

"Why, child alive, you do things yourself," the senator remonstrated. "She makes busts, Slade—heads. Done some big guns in Europe."

Katherine sighed and leaned back wearily in her chair. "Oh, in my feminine way, I model," she admitted. "But if there'd been one drop of Napoleon in father I shouldn't have had to fall back on molding clay. I should have been molding," she hesitated, and then finished daringly, "opinions and people."

CHAPTER III.

Just how much more freely Katherine might have revealed her aims and inspirations, Slade could not know, for at that moment the butler appeared and engaged his attention.

As the man withdrew, Slade spread wide his arms and announced grandiloquently:

"The gentleman of the water-front crowd, if you please. Mr. Wesley Merritt, the gentleman who wasn't going to darken my door, is here!"

He broke off with a loud, mirthless laugh. As well as any man who ever lived, he liked to feel the grip of his own power. He had come to the point where it was genuine satisfaction to humble men and conquer things.

"Wesley Merritt!" the senator was almost too surprised for speech. "After his abuse of you in the paper today—. And Hunt! How did you do it?"

"This is the sort of thing I like," broke in Katherine, eagerly. "Oh, it's so exciting," she declared, her eyes glowing with eagerness and animation. "Oh, Mr. Slade, how did you make them kow-tow?"

Slade's reply was prevented by the brusque, excited entrance of Merritt and Hunt. The pair, angry and belligerent, strode into the room without a word. Merritt, small, wiry, energetic, was in the lead, followed closely by his shadow and echo, Hunt.

"Is it true?" he demanded angrily, before he realized that Slade was not alone. "How do you do, senator—Miss Strickland!" he exclaimed, in surprise. "Lovely home you have, Mr. Slade," he added, trying to adjust himself to the scene he had not expected.

"An astonishing rumor has reached us, Mr. Slade," he finally declared, getting down to the business of his invasion. "It concerns you, senator. It concerns every public-spirited man in the city. Is it true, Slade, that you have bought up our entire water front on which our residences—our old homes—the mansions of the city face, and that you intend building factories there?"

"Why, yes," Slade admitted, with maddening calmness.

"What?" Strickland almost shouted, completely astounded.

"But—but it can't be done," Merritt was so excited now that he stuttered his words.

"It can't be done," echoed Hunt. He was well paid for being an echo.

"Our best people live there," protested Merritt.

"I live there," Hunt added, with accumulated emphasis.

"All of us," Merritt continued, "take pride in the view along the water front. It's damnable. Why, out of common decency, man— What do you want of factories, anyway?" he demanded, completely angered and out of patience.

Slade's voice was almost a drawl, it was so low-pitched and so provokingly calm. "Why didn't you and your associates protect your holdings?" he inquired.

"How'd we know a man with millions would come along and buy up the whole beach?" Merritt's wrath was getting beyond the control that Katherine's presence demanded. "Slade, if you persist in this," he thundered, "I'm going to take off my coat and hit back. My paper has an enormous outside circulation, and I'll baste you once every day. If you propose running for governor, you won't get one vote in your own town. And in one month, or less, you'll find San Francisco has a gorgeous climate."

Slade was unperturbed by Merritt's threats or Merritt's bulldozing. "All right, Merritt," he advised, good-naturedly, "go ahead with your paper, I'll take my chances."

"You will, eh?" Merritt's tone was ominous. "What sort of factories are you going to build?"

"Well," drawled Slade, coolly, "I was thinking of putting up glue factories!"

"Glue!" The one word jumped from everyone's mouth at once. "Glue!" they all repeated, and looked at each other in consternation.

"The h—l you say," then remembering himself. "I beg your pardon, Miss Strickland."

"It can't be done," Merritt went on. "You can't build glue factories here," and he emphasized every word with an angry shake of his finger.

"By God, you—"

He broke off as he saw Bob Hayes stride into the room. Hayes, as Slade's lawyer and almost a member of the family, had the entree to the house at all times.

"Here's my lawyer," remarked Slade, dryly, "ask him."

"Of course it can be done," Hayes informed them, convincingly. "It's perfectly legitimate."

Then, as if to dismiss a perfectly obvious subject, he turned to the girl, who had been enjoying every point that Slade had scored.

Katherine's eyes lighted with warm welcome. It was the first time she had seen Hayes since she had returned. He was the man she had once wanted to marry, once before her father had given her the choice of Hayes or a finishing school in Paris and a tour of Europe. Now she greeted him with cordial friendship, but with none of the sweet tenderness he might have expected from her. Once she had looked up into his eyes and thought him a god. Now, her eyes blinded by the glare of ambition, she saw only a good looking chap, a struggling lawyer, a man who hadn't made any particular mark in the world. She returned Hayes' burning, penetrating gaze with cool, unruffled frankness. In another moment she had turned from him and was earnestly watching Slade, listening to his every word with eager intentness.

"You see, I'm a very simple sort of fellow," Slade was saying, "don't drink—don't smoke—don't keep yachts or horses, don't keep wo—" he stopped in his oft-repeated formula as he remembered Katherine's presence, "don't keep horses, so I must do something, as I was saying to Mrs. Slade today. I don't want to bother my neighbors, so I'll build high chimneys, so the smoke won't trouble you much. I'm going into the glue business. That is, of course," and he paused and surveyed the group about him with a complacent elevation of his eyebrows, "that is, unless you gentlemen can keep me busy in some other way. I'm a very active man."

Katherine leaned forward with tense expression to see how the man's opponents would take his game. The senator was smiling, Merritt tapping his foot restlessly.

"Well, boys, it looks as though he had us—strong?" Strickland broke the silence. "Glue! Whew!"

"Are we going to be had?" demanded Merritt, testily, "are we going to stand for this holdup?" and he turned disgustedly toward the door.

"Don't you think we'd better keep Mr. Slade busy in some other way," Strickland repeated.

Merritt's hasty departure was the signal for Katherine to adjust her wraps and remark: "We must be late for Tristan."

Hayes followed her. "I must see you alone, Katherine. You're still free—there's no foreigner on the scene, is there, Katherine?"

"Bob," Katherine's voice was sweet but firm. "I don't think I shall ever marry now—"

"Oh, nonsense," he protested.

"No," even more positively. "The more I see of men—but what's the use? There never was but one man I could have got on with, and I didn't happen to live in his time."

"Who was the boy?" Hayes asked, lightly.

"Strange," Katherine replied, pensively, "I've just been talking about him—Napoleon Bonaparte."

"Oh, Lord—that fellow." Hayes was much relieved. "Can I have tomorrow evening?"

"Yes—if you—yes—tomorrow evening, Bob."

Her voice lingered a bit on the Bob, and with quick impulsiveness Hayes caught her hand and kissed it.

In another minute she had turned to Slade.

"Oh, Mr. Slade, won't you let me make a head of you?"

"A head of me?" Slade repeated in surprise.

"Think it over," Katherine suggested, as she and her father went out, leaving Hayes and Slade watching her proud, graceful figure until it disappeared from view.

Slade looked critically at Hayes for a moment or two after the girl had gone.

"Oh, now I remember," he suddenly exclaimed. "You're the chap she gave up for Paris a long time ago?"

"When she was twenty-one and I was twenty-four and six feet one inch of a western lawyer, just out of the woods. How does Mrs. Slade take to this governorship business?" he finished, abruptly.

"She doesn't take to it." Slade's voice was hard.

"I was afraid she wouldn't."

"Well, nobody's going to stand in my way." A malignant light showed in his eyes.

"My boy, I'm out to win."

In spite of the fact that he was in full evening attire, he thrust his hands into his pockets and almost strutted about the room. "I outgeneraled that crowd here tonight. By God, I did! Do you know—?" He paused in his walk and looked down on Hayes' six feet sprawled over one of the brocaded chairs—"there's just a little drop of that fellow—Napoleon Bonaparte—in me!"

"Napoleon Bonaparte got on by leaving a woman behind," Hayes returned, seriously, refusing to enter into Slade's spirit of self-satisfied good humor.

"You mind your own d—n business, Bob," Slade turned on him, suddenly.

"All right—I'm off to the opera. I only meant that Napoleon was a bad boy for you to follow, because he treated his first wife like a dirty d[illegible] little Austrian hussy paid him back. That's all. I love Mrs. Slade. When I was sick with fever in your mining camp she was a mother to me."

"Don't forget that I made you," Slade reminded him. "I," and he tapped his chest. "I gave you your chance."

"I don't. All the same I'd hate to see you elected, because of Mrs. Slade. It seems to be the regular thing, becoming universal, for a very successful man to leave home the minute he's on his feet. Good night."

"One minute, Bob. You've given me a lot of good advice. I'll give you some. Are you in love with that girl?"

"Yes," Hayes grunted; "good night. Is that all?"

"No;" Slade paused, watching Hayes through narrowed eyelids. "That girl needs a large pie with every one of her fingers in it. Bob, I'm sorry for you. Your pie isn't big enough."

"Well—it's my pie. Good night," and he was gone.

After Hayes had gone, Slade sat, his arms resting on the table, staring into space. Every now and then the corners of his mouth came down and his eyes narrowed. He was thinking of Katherine Strickland and Hayes. That woman for Hayes! Hayes must be a presumptuous pup to ever think of winning that queen. Such women were meant for the kings of the earth—not for their hirelings.

NEW DISCOVERY ABOUT ANTS

Scientist Asserts That the Insects Have a Regular Form of Salutation Among Themselves.

Ants have long been known for their excessive industry, but from a curious communication which has just appeared they seem to have surpassed all other insects by organizing an elaborate system of signaling.

Professor Bugnion, who has recently investigated the habits of the white ant, reports that the "soldiers" of that species give warnings or encouraging signals by knocking with their jaws upon dry leaves, thereby emitting a crackling sound. Placing some of these ants on a big plate and covering it with paper, he found that the "soldiers" among the ants responded to his taps with a rustling, crackling sound.

Moreover, apart from this audible signaling, there appears to be some inaudible form of signal, for the professor asserts that the "soldier" ants salute the worker ants.

To do this, "the insect stands firmly on its legs with the head raised and the body slightly oblique, and shakes itself for an instant with a convulsive shudder. This seems to mean something."

ECUADOR'S COMMERCIAL CAPITAL

GUAYAQUIL, the largest port and the chief commercial city of Ecuador, is located on the west bank of the River Guayas, about seventy miles from the sea, in a splendid situation, at the end of deep-water navigation, and at the confluence of a number of rivers that spread over much of the country that lies to the westward of the Andes, says a writer in the Pan American Magazine.

Rounding a bend in the river we pass a number of shipbuilding yards and factories, and then, as our steamer slowly draws up to her anchorage, the whole of the busy water front is revealed to our view like the unrolling of a scene in a panorama. Backed by low hills, the city lies on a piece of level ground in an open and beautiful situation, stretching for several miles by the side of the river, which is at this point more than a mile wide and deep enough for steamers of considerable size. The whole of the water front is occupied by jetties and piers, where craft of many different types load and discharge their cargoes, the twin spires of the cathedral and numerous churches stand up, white and gleaming above the roofs of the houses, fine buildings face the water, and on a wide thoroughfare between them and the water streams of traffic pass to and fro.

The first impression of Guayaquil is that it is a large and busy place, with considerable local and foreign trade—an impression that is fully confirmed by closer acquaintance. The city is laid out in squares with streets running parallel to the river intersected by others at right angles to it, buildings are large and in good style, and there is a general air of business-like activity. The streets, well cambered and paved with blocks of gray stone, are remarkably wide, many of them are lined with trees, and the whole city has been laid out in accordance with modern ideas with decidedly good effect.

STREET SCENE IN GUAYAQUIL

Great Activity In Trade.

A walk through the busier streets show that there is considerable activity in the city in both wholesale and retail trades. There are many large offices and stores, the latter exhibiting splendid stocks of goods behind their big plate-glass windows. Commerce and trade are chiefly located on the water front and in the streets in that vicinity. The Malecon, one side occupied by large commercial houses and the other open to the river, though no wider than other streets in the city, has room for three street car lines (one of them electric) and a double railroad track without incommoding the ordinary street traffic. All along the river side piers are built out over the green bank, connecting with floating landing stages where cargo is landed from all kinds of small craft, river steamers, sailing vessels, lighters, and cayucas, to be transferred to the railroad for conveyance to the customhouse or carried to nearby warehouses. Out on the river ocean steamers lie at anchor, tugs and motor launches race along close to the water's edge, steam ferryboats slowly plow their way across the river from Duran, the terminus of the Quito railroad, and cayucas are dexterously paddled in and out among the piers to escape the effects of the swift tide. Life and movement are incessant, and the busy scene, on water and on land, well illustrates the commercial activity of the city.

The three streets running parallel to the Malecon are just as full of business as the water front, and here we find the largest banks, many commercial houses, and large stores. These thoroughfares for a great part of their length are of even greater width than the other streets in the city, comparing very favorably in this respect with streets in the finest cities of Europe and the United States. The Calle Nueve de Octubre is rendered conspicuous by its long avenue of ficus (called in Spanish "higuera"), sturdy trees, with gnarled stems, bare up to a height of about ten feet and then spreading out into a thick, bushy top. These tops have all been trimmed to a cylindrical shape, and as the trees are of very even growth the effect is neat and regular to a degree. This is not by any means the only avenue of trees in Guayaquil, but it is the best and most remarkable.

The chief business in Guayaquil is, of course, the export of cacao, for Ecuador is one of the greatest producers of this valuable food product in the world, the welfare of the city, and, indeed, of the whole country depending almost entirely on the cacao crop and the market. Most of the firms engaged in this trade have their offices and warehouses on or near the Malecon above the Calle Nueve de Octubre, conveniently situated for receiving the product from the river craft that bring it down from the interior and for shipping it away to Europe and America, while the broad streets serve as drying grounds for the red-dish-brown beans.

Guayaquil is particularly well provided with public squares and open spaces such as the Plaza Bolivar, containing a fine bronze equestrian statue of the great libertador, the Plaza Pedro Carbo, near the Merced church, and the Plazas Montalvo, Rocafuerte, and Sucre. All of these are well kept and bright with roses, many colored crotons, and other tropical plants, besides having excellent bronze statues of men celebrated in the history of the country.

The city has an excellent street car system, partially electrified, with lines running across and from end to end of the town through all the principal streets. It is well worth the visitor's while to make a trip along the Calle Industria, leading from the center of the city southward to the district where the chief local manufacturers and shipbuilding yards are located, for Guayaquil has many other industries besides those directly connected with the cacao trade.

Close to Equator But Cool.

Although Guayaquil is only about two degrees south of the equator the climate is very much cooler than might be expected, the dry season, lasting from May to December, being the best part of the year. Visiting the city during the month of August the writer found the days agreeably cool and the nights almost cold; even during the hottest part of the day, from noon to four o'clock, a cloth suit could be worn without any discomfort. This surprising coolness is due to the effect of the Humboldt current, a stream of cold water from the Antarctic regions that, flowing northward along the west coast of South America, makes a considerable reduction in the temperature.

As an example of the progressive spirit of the Ecuadorians nothing could be more illustrative than the scheme for augmenting the city water supply, laying down a modern system of drainage and sewerage, improving the sanitary arrangements in general, and for street paving that is now being put into execution. When the entire project has been carried out Guayaquil will be one of the healthiest, most beautiful, and attractive cities on the west coast of South America.

The coolness of the summer months, the open position of the city, and the plentiful supplies of excellent fish, fruit, and vegetables to be obtained, go far toward making life in Guayaquil pleasant and enjoyable.

Most advantageously situated for both interior and exterior commerce, with a large area of fertile country behind it and a deep, wide river leading to the open sea in front, Guayaquil is a city to be reckoned with in South American commerce, while its wide streets, fine buildings, and distinctive air cannot fail to make a favorable impression on the visitor. It is not only a city with a great future but also a city with a well developed and very decided present, all ready and fully prepared for vast increases in its trade

Nothing Doing for Fourth of July Salesman and Man Who Sells Programs at Inauguration.

Julian Harris, son of the late Joel Chandler Harris, is Sunday editor of the New York Herald, and on his way home in the early watches of the morning often stops to hear the wails of the "down-and-outs" who flock for a first peep at the "Help Wanted" ads posted at the side of the Herald building, says Washington Herald.

Two scantily dressed men, evidently of the "submerged tenth," were shivering about the board, their faces blue from the morning chill.

"Naw," said the other. "Things are a-gettin' worse and worse."

"What's your line when you work?" queried the first.

"Who—me? Why, I am a Fourth of July fireworks salesman. What's yourn?"

"I sell programs at the presidential inaugurations."

ONE CENT LETTER POSTAGE BEING AGITATED

One cent postage rate on letters is again being brought into prominence and many high officials declare that it is sure to come in the near future. All classes of business would be greatly benefited by its adoption, and estimated statistics show there would be such an increased demand for stamps that the apparent loss of revenue would be more than made up.

It is an impossibility to place an estimated value on health, it being a most priceless possession—but, perhaps you have been careless or negligent and have allowed weakness to develop until you are now in a badly run-down condition, with poor appetite, impaired digestion and constipated bowels.

In order to get back to health and strength you must first help Nature restore the Stomach, Liver and Bowels to a normal condition. This suggests the friendly aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. You will find it an excellent tonic, appetizer and strength maker and well worthy of your confidence.

It is an absolutely pure medicine, adapted to all ordinary family ailments, and your health will be greatly improved by giving it a fair trial at once. Be sure you get the genuine Hostetter's Stomach Bitters with our Private Stamp over the neck of Bottle.

OLD JOKE IS SPOILED

Pound of Feathers Weighs More Than Pound of Lead.

Has Been Established as a Scientific Fact—Matter of Volume Is the Point That Must Be Considered.

The old joke, "Which is heavier, a pound of lead or a pound of feathers?" is not quite such a joke as it seems at first glance. Archimedes taught us the truth that a body immersed in a liquid or gas receives an upward push equal to the weight of the liquid or the gas it displaces. Suppose we arrange a balance so that one of its arms can be introduced under the bell of an air pump, and place upon each of its arms a weight, say one pound, both weights made of the same size. They will exactly balance each other. If we exhaust the air from under the bell, producing a vacuum, we remove the upward push, and the arm of the balance that is in the vacuum descends. If on the contrary we compress the air under the bell we make the displaced air weigh more and consequently the upward push is increased and this arm of the balance ascends.

It is manifest that the greater amount of air displaced the greater will be the upward push. Suppose now we balance a pound of lead on one arm and a pound of feathers on the other. They will, of course, exactly equal each other in ordinary air, for they were both weighed in ordinary air. Now let us put the whole apparatus, including both weights, under an air pump. The pound of feathers displaces far more air than the pound of lead, and if we exhaust the air we shall find that, the upward push being removed by the exhaustion of the air, the pound of feathers descends and the pound of lead ascends, proving that the seeming paradox that a pound of feathers weighs more than a pound of lead is a joke [illegible] the fact.

Therefore it may scientifically be said that of two substances having the same weight and not the same volume that having the larger volume is really the heavier.

Shoots Deer With Opium.

John Benham, a well-known Wisconsin guide, who had been commissioned to capture a huge deer alive for a private game preserve near Hurley, Wis., has captured the biggest deer ever taken alive in that state—a six-prong, 300-pound buck—by the simple expedient of using opium pellets instead of the usual lead bullets in hunting. Benham had a druggist make him the shot he wanted—a mixture of gum arabic, flour paste and opium. Then he went to watch for the deer, which all of the guides had, because of its size, refused to allow hunters to kill. When he saw the big fellow he cut loose with his gun, and he caught up with the deer two hours later, when it had fallen asleep in some balsams. When the deer woke up it had been boxed.—Brooklyn (Wis.) Dispatch to Detroit Free Press.

Mink Gets Big Trout.

While crossing the bridge over the creek near H. P. Johnson's sawmill at Bethany, Wayne county, New York, George Bennett saw a mink dive through the ice and catch a large trout. Bennett called to Monroe Tyler, at the mill, and the two men pelted the mink with stones in an attempt to capture him.

Bennett's dog assisted by chasing the mink to his hole, from which the two men dug him with pickaxes. When the mink was finally killed he still retained the trout, which measured 14 inches in length, in his mouth.

Ferocious Duck Nips Tramp.

"Beware of the Duck" is the sign Edgar Wilhelm of New Freedom is preparing to tack to the yard gate. The fowl, a particularly large one, has delegated to itself the duties of a watchdog. Its loud quacking gives warning of the approach of a stranger, day or night, and it savagely attacks intruders, as a tramp who came recently to the house to beg, has reason to know. He was pinched in the seat of his trousers so painfully that he beat a hasty retreat, the duck flying after him to the gate.—York (Pa.) Dispatch to Philadelphia Record.

Literary Note.

The first sentence of Henry James' novel has been published in book form. It has been running as a serial and has attracted much attention. Several of the film manufacturers have been approached with a view to turning it into a photoplay, but have declined on the ground of expense, declaring that it would take from fifteen to twenty episodes to film it in its entirety.—Philadelphia Ledger.

London's Treasures Guarded.

Extensive precautions have been taken in London to guard art treasures against the menace of air raids. The custodians of art galleries and museums long ago removed to vaults or similar places the most precious of their portable exhibits. At the British museum a number of priceless manuscripts, books, and other objects have been stored away in safes. Some measure of risk must, however, be borne in a building which contains 40 miles of bookshelves and massive pieces of sculpture. Visitors to the National gallery find the major part of the building closed. At the Guildhall the most valuable pictures have been placed in the basement. The magnificent Gainsborough, "Fording the River," has been removed from the walls. In the corporation strong room in the basement is stored what is probably the finest collection of municipal records in the world. It includes the charter of William the Conqueror "to William, Bishop and Gosfegdh, Portreeve, and all the burgesses within London," securing to them their ancient liberties. Every reign since the Conqueror is represented in the charters.

WONDERFUL HOW RESINOL STOPS ITCHING AT ONCE

To those who have endured for years the itching torments of eczema or other such skin-eruptions, the relief that the first use of resinol ointment and resinol soap gives is perfectly incredible. After all the suffering they have endured and all the useless treatments they spent good money for, they cannot believe anything so simple, mild and inexpensive can stop the itching and burning INSTANTLY! And they find it still more wonderful that the improvement is permanent and that resinol really drives away the eruption completely in a very short time. Perhaps there is a pleasant surprise like this in store for you. Resinol ointment and resinol soap are sold by all druggists.—Adv.

FRANK J. STANTON, Proprietor and Publisher
Devoted to the Interests of Washington Township

Entered as Second Class Matter, July 17, 1909, at the Post Office at Niles, California, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Several weeks ago we published a communication on the water question signed "A Taxpayer," which up to that time did not interest us. The result of the publication of the communication was that the smoldering spark of public indignation was fanne into a flame and if there is no explanation forthcoming from the Water Commissioners, we shall cross swords with that honorable body at the demand of the taxpayers, to protect their interests and get at the bottom of the Alameda County Water District.

If any one wants to know who Mr. Taxpayer is, just take a stroll around and interview the farmers and small land owners and big land owners of the district, and you will find that nine out of every ten of the people you talk with could easily be Mr. Taxpayer.

At the request of many citizens who did not see the original communication we will again publish it, as the letter appeared in both local papers in the issue of April the 8th.

Some Pertinent Questions

Niles, April 5, 1915.

Mr. Editor:—I would like to ask the Water Commissioners of the Alameda County District through your paper, a few questions:

1st. What is the object of having so many men do the same work over and over again?

2nd. Is it not true the data you now are taking is on record and has been for some time?

3d. When will you have the water flowing under the Niles Bridge all summer as it did before the Spring Valley Company paid in cash for riparian rights more than the land was worth?

4th. In what way are the taxpayers to receive any benefit for all the money they are paying out? And how long will they have to keep on paying for nothing.

5th. Will it be necessary to bring suit to recover our lost rights or the rights some of the Commissioners sold us out on?

6th. If it costs us 12 cents on each $100 for the year 1914 to mantain the commission expenses when we had no suits or trouble, how much will it be when we have [illegible] have lawyers fees, court and witnesses expenses to pay fighting a rich corporation or city?

7th. What have the commissioners done so far for the small taxpayers or the small land owners with the money he has to pay?

8th. Is not thesole benefit of this district organization to benefit the large holders of creek and overflow lands by filling up their gravel beds and adding soil to their marsh lands at the expense and taxation of the district?

I would like to have the answers to these questions published for the edification of the public.

A TAXPAYER

Clever men sometimes dupe the public, but even a man with brains seldom gets away with it. If the above questions cannot be answered,, then who is responsible for a situation that has made fools of us all?

The people of this county want facts.. Our opinions have not yet crystallized, but if explanations are not forthcoming that will tell us where our money is going to and what we are going to get for it and all the other information Mr. Taxpayer wants, we will have to assume that the Commissioners are afraid to tell us.

Here is the second communication we have just received from Mr. Taxpayer:

Mr. Taxpayer Again Opens Up on the Alameda County Water District.

Editor:—

I see Mr. Runckel takes exceptions to the questions asked the water commissioners. I would say right here that as far as I have been able to determine it makes no difference to him what the taxes are. A man who is neither a resident nor a tax payer don't care how much our taxes are.

Referring to the suit, the water commissioners has brought against the Spring Valley Water Company, asking for an injunction to stop work on the Calaveras dam—this first move is only a ruse and the injunction asked for will not be granted for the reason that there is more water flowing in the water shed this side of the dam than the banks of the Alameda Creek can hold.

Take all the land between Niles and the Calaveras dam on the one hand, then take all the land from Sunol to Altamont and you will find you have a water shed of twenty-four miles long by over six miles wide—this will more than fill the Alameda Creek from bank to bank.

Why do the town people have to pay tax to help pay the restoration of the water in the creek bed? Any one that has had any dealings with our farmers at any time, knows they can buy the stuff for less money after the commissioners get it than they can from them.

Just one word to the President of the Alameda County [illegible] District

The Spring Valley Water Company never threatened to bring suit against a single person but one John L. Beard—every other property holder received more money for their riparian rights than they offered to sell them for and was afraid they would not buy from them. Now you want us all to get in and pull to pay a few of you, back with interest for money you have received.

A TAXPAYER

Get this. "There is more water flowing in the water shed, this side of the Calaveras dam than the Alameda Creek can hold. Take all the land between Niles and the Calaveras dam on the one hand, then take all the land from Sunol to Altamont and you will have a watershed 24 miles long by 6 miles wide. This will more than fill the Alameda Creek from bank to bank."

How about this—if this is true—if we can corroborate this statement. Surely it cannot be possible that the Water District was formed simply to get money to pay different salaries, attorney fees' etc., etc., and benefit one or two large land owners? Of course, we don't know yet whether the men who started the agitation of the water district are the men who have received the salaries, or if the promoters will receive any benefit from the flood waters. We have not settled that point yet. We have been seeking that information for the last couple of weeks. We don't want to accuse any man unjustly of doing anything dishonorable; all we wanted to know was where the money was being spent, and now before these points are settled Mr. Taxpayer comes out saying that the whole proposition has been built on a bluff. What is the comparison of the areas of the Calaveras watersheds to the watershed area that will continue to flow into the creek? Does is mean that the creek will be filled up just the same and only the terriffic force of the stream that causes thousands of dollars of damage every year will be eliminated?

If there is plenty of water to fill the creek, after the dam is constructed and it is only the waste water that will be held in check by the dam, if this is really the case, and in one small instance a man has been enforced, getting nothing in return, to give up a dollar that he might have used for anything from the education of his children to the luxury of a cigar, then it is about time for us to take off our coats and go to work.

The first meeting to discuss the recall will probably be held at Irvington.

In a rather loosly played game Sunday, Niles defeated the Kahn Bros. at Sullivan Park, by a score of 8 to 5. It was a surprise to the management also to the fans to see the Kahn Bros., appear upon the field, as the McDonald & Collett club had been booked. However, at the last minute, it was found that McDonald & Collett could not appear, so Kahn Bros., come to Niles in their stead.

NILES- ESSANAY INDIANS PLAY "JIM WIGGS" NEWARK NEWARK CLUB SUNDAY

For their opponents next Sunday the Niles-Essanay Indians will have "Jim Wiggs" Idlewilds of Newark. This club is a newcomer to the fans of this neck of the woods. However, with such old favorites as Wiggs at their head, assures Niles of a rattling good showing [illegible]

They ha[illegible] teams in and around here, winning from Livermore last Sunday by a score of 9 to 2.

Play will be called promptly at 3 p. m., with Garrett Norris handling the indicator, and a large crowd is looked for.

PICKED UP HERE AND THERE

A league in Arizone to be known as the Rio Grande Association has given work to several ball players from disbanded leagues. McClosky organized the Rio Grande Baseball Association and the season opened April 20 with teams in the following cities: El Paso, Texas, Phoenix, Arizona, Deming, Arizona, Albuquerque, New Mexico, Tuscon, Arizona and Silver City, New Mexico. The league is in organized baseball and rated as a Class D league. Herb Hester will manage Phoenix, George Reed will manage Albuquerque, Ed Ward will manage Silver City, Bill Hurley will handle Deming. Tuscon and El Paso have not named their managers up to this writing.

The clubs will only carry 12 players and a salary limit of $1200 has been set for this season.

Nineteen Fifteen marks the hardest year ever witnessed by professional ball players as every league has cut the salary in two and also the players' limit, throwing several realball players out of jobs. This can be said to be the very reason why we find so many players broke and looking elsewhere for employment. Among the country teams can be found players of Class A ability, this being responsible for the class of ball among the country teams.. Below can be found the names of several high class ball players to be found among the country teams around and about the bay: Cliff Marshall, 1912-1913 with Butte, Montana with Salt Lake Pacific Coast league 1915; released to cut down player limit. Rusell, With Moose Jaw, Western Canada league, which disbanded on account of poor attendance. Also Daniels, this year with Oakland in coast league, but belonged to Medicine Hat in the Western Canada league. Other players of ability are, Joe Seaton, pitcher; Ed. Killilay, pitcher; Hale Leggett, first base; Cook, catcher; Williams center field; Croll, short stop; Goldie, second base; Red Lynch, center field; Monahan, pitcher; LeClaire, pitcher; Owens, short stop; Cunningham, center field; Norton, first base; Gay, short stop; Marshall, centerfield; Rusell pitcher; Davis, third base; Lowe, utility; Garrett, second base; Sund, catcher; Whittenmeyer, center field; Ed Fries, center field; Esola, short stop; Wiggs, pitcher; Luke Glavenich, pitcher; Lasswater, catcher; Ross, pitcher; Gus Lind, pitcher; Ray Augustas short stop; Fred Carnes, third base; Dick Hillman, second base; Black, out field; Clark, pitcher; Art McLean, catcher; Dutch Hoffman, catcher; Bert Delmas, short stop; Babe Driscoll, pitcher; Swaine, outfield; Lang, pitcher; Duncan, catcher; Kelley, pitcher; Watson, catcher; Goose Pittman, outfield; Eddie Teck, outfield; Stephens, catcher; Johnny Butler, short stop; Norman Boeckel, second base; Mike Mitchell, fiirst base; Nagle, pitcher; Johnson, catcher; Reeder, short stop; Hap Smith, out field; Indian Smith, outfield; Quincy, outfield; Bill Fox, out field; Kid Wicker, outfield; Kilroy, pitcher; Pat Harkins, pitcher; Bull Durham, pitcher; Letty Hough, first base; Biff Culver, outfield; Merritt, outfield. These players and others, too numerous to mention, are out of work. All the above named players were members of the Union Association Western Tri-State league which disbanded on account of poor box office receipts, or lack of interest, caused by the war.

NILES ESSANAY DEFEAT KAHN BORS. OF OAKLAND

Last Sunday was a gala day for the Essanay warriors, who galloped around the cushions at will and took the scalp of the Kahn Bros., team to the tune of 8 to 5, and the visiting team went home with the impression that the Niles boys have a regular ball team.

The features of Sunday's game were the pitching of Dolan and the home run drive to deep left center of Kite Robinson, who crossed the fourth sack in great distress but wearing a large smile.

A new face appeared in the lineup of the Essanay Indians, in the person of Spider Garrett by name, who, although small, filled the third base position in a way that satisfied the fans, who pay to see real baseball. Spider only hit 666, but that can be over looked. The little fellow played third base for Tuscon in the Arizona state league last year, and was on his way to Victoria, B. C., in the Northwestern circuit, when he was overtaken by hard luck in San Francisco. When word came of the big cuts in salaries he and Speed Lowe, who played second for Snow's Newark team last Sunday, refused to report.

Mike Steffine, who handles the San Jose team of the State League, tried to gather in both of these boys, but could not agree on the financial terms.

The fans at the game last Sunday were very much disappointed at the non-appearance of Broncho Billy, who way in Los Angeles on business, but it is hoped that he will be there to coach his boys next Sunday when the Essanay Indians cross bats with Mr. Graham's Idlewilds of Newark. The Idlewilds are ably captained by the old war horse, Jimmie Wiggs, who has played professional ball for quite a number of years, and as there is quite a little rivalry between the two teams, we can predict a great treat for the fans who are able to attend the game on the Niles diamond which is being put in condition by a force of men under the supervision of Mr.Sund.

If possible the boys' band of Pleasanton will be on hand to celebrate the occasion, so come early and root for your favorites.

WELSH OUTPOINTS WATSON

Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion won a newspaper decision over Red Watson the Niles lightweight in a ten round bout at Hudson, Wis., Tuesday night. Watson tried continually for a knockout but the superior cleverness of the English fighter kept him out of danger throughout.

NILES ENGAGES OLD UMPIRE

The Niles Essanay baseball management are pleased to announce that they have engaged Mr. Garrett Norris to umpire all games played at Sullivan park during the remainder of the coming season. This news should be received with a shout of joy by the fans in this vicinity, as those who have witnessed the games played here this season know that a competent official in this important poition is all that is needed. Mr. Norris is so well known around the township that there is no need to attempt an introduction for him. It is hoped that a large crowd of his friends will be on hand next Sunday to give him a rousing welcome on his return to Sullivan park.

Niles has engaged the fastest clubs around this vicinity and with a good umpire will furnish a fast brand of baseball, so come out and root out a victory.

SEMI- PRO. BINGLES

Last Sunday Snow's team defeated the St. Mary's College on the Newark diamond by the close score of 4 to 3. The game was one of the kind very seldom witnessed outside of professional company, only one being charged up to both teams.

Red Lynch was in the Newark lineup and showed his old-time form by hitting safely three out of four times up.

Bill Dodge, the California University pitcher, pitched great ball for Newark. He allowed six hits and made 12 walk the strikeout plank.

Shorty Wales, a local lad, was also in Del Snow's lineup, and played a good allround game.

Newark is well supplied with baseball as there is a second team under the management of Mr. Graham, known as the "Idlewilds. Federal League baseball is what Newark is up against, and the fans of the town will have to get out and boost so both teams can keep their heads above water.

The Idlewilds have a strong line-up, several league ball players being found among them: Lefty Russell, last year with Moose Jaw in the Western Canada League, is doing the pitching, and is a class A boxman. Jim Wiggs, the old-time Coast League pitcher, is covering first base. Jimmy hits the ball hard at all times. Speed Lowe, as he is known in several parts of the country, made his first appearance in a Newark uniform and showed himself to be every inch a ball player. He covered second base with glory by his great stops of seemingly impossible chances. Lowe belongs to Victoria, in the Northwestern League, and would not report on account of a large cut in his pay envelope. He was also on the reserve list of the Sacramento Coast League team of 1913, when Aiken was owner. Bull Caroll and Goldie, two State League ball players, are also with the Idlewilds, and make a hard infield combination to beat.

Del Snow is one of the greatest boosters that baseball will see in this part of the country for several years to come.

The Niles Essanay Indians will cross bats with Idlewild Sunday and a real ball game is expected. Not a polo match as was staged on the Niles grounds last Sunday.

Every fan in Niles should get out and boost the home team along Sunday, as a great game can be expected.

Spike Whittenmeyer is one of the most natural ball players seen in this town in many a day. Hitting the ball hard all the time and fielding his position in errorless fashion is bound to bring him to the top in the near future.

HEARD AT LEAGUE TRAINING CAMPS

It may be significent of the trend of public sentiment—Last year all the independent teams organized calling themselves "Federals;" now they are all adopting the name "Jitney's"

"This Southern training is fine for the winter resorts," remarks Zach Wheaton, "but the time to get in condition is all the time. I would advise all players to buy farms and spend their winters working them, then they won't have to run around the ball park 'steen times a between meals trying to get down to weight.

Here's a mean one from the pen of Grantland Rice, who is reporting happenings in the training camps of the New York Yankees: "As a flotilla of buzzards sailed high over the field, Duke Farrell rushed over to the bench and grabbed a bat. "They've gotten a whiff of my arm' roared the Duke, and I forgot to bring out a gun.'"

A writer for the New York Mail remarks that a major league training camp is an institution for training players for the minor leagues and that a major league scout is a man who travels about selecting men to fill the upper berths in sleeping cars. Likewise a minor league manager is a man who waits until the fruit on the major league tree is ripe and then picks it.

DID HE DECEIVE THEM?

SCHOOLMASTER'S ASSERTION WAS NEVER VERIFIED.

True or Not, However, It Had the Effect of Making Culprits Own Up to Guilt and Take the Consequences.

Describing the lighter side of school life, Ian Hay, the Scotch novelist, tells of a schoolmaster who called his boys together.

"A very unpleasant and discreditable thing has happened," he said. "The municipal authorities have recently erected a pair of extremely ornate and expensive lampposts outside the residence of the mayor of the town.

"Those lampposts appear to have attracted the unfavorable notice of the school.

"Last Sunday evening, between seven and eight o'clock, they were attacked and wrecked, apparently by volleys of stone."

There was a faint but appreciative murmur from those members of the school to whom the news of this outrage was now made public for the first time. But a baleful flash from the schoolmaster's spectacles restored instant silence.

"Several parties of boys," he continued, "must have passed these lampposts on that evening, on their way back to their respective houses after chapel. I wish to see all boys who in any way participated in the outrage in my study directly after second school. I warn them that I shall make a severe example of them."

His voice rose to a blare.

"I will not have the prestige and fair fame of the school lowered in the eyes of the town by the vulgar barbarities of a parcel of ill-conditioned little street boys. You may go!"

The audience rose to their feet and began to steal silently away. But they were puzzled. The Old Man was no fool, as a rule. Did he really imagine that chaps would be such mugs as to own up?

But before the first boy reached the door the head spoke again.

"I may mention," he added very gently, "that the attack upon the—er lampposts was witnessed by a gentleman resident in the neighborhood, a warm friend of the school. He was able to identify one of the culprits, whose name is in my possession. That is all."

And quite enough, too. When the schoolmaster visited his study after second school he found 17 malefactors meekly awaiting chastisement.

But he never divulged the name of the boy who had been recognized, or, for that matter, the identity of the warm friend of the school. I wonder!

Canada's 72-Inch Reflector.

Work is progressing rapidly on this instrument, which will be probably, for a short time only, the largest telescope in the world, pending the completion of the 100-inch reflector for Mt. Wilson. The disk for the great mirror started from Antwerp about a week before the war broke out. After its arrival at New York the Pennsylvania railroad was about a week in finding a suitable car to transport it to Pittsburgh, and then there was further delay before an iron wagon could be obtained to transport it to Doctor Brashear's workshop, where it was finally placed on the grinding table. The hazardous work of boring and smoothing off the hole in the center of the mirror has been accomplished with entire success. It is expected that the mounting will be completed by October next.—Scientific American.

Motorcycle Ambulances.

The uses of the motorcycle are unlimited. They are used as pleasure vehicles, for delivering messages, packages, and lately are developing into useful conveyances for heavy loads, as they are built more powerfully and with more endurance each succeeding year. The last word in usefulness is their adoption by several European nations as conveyances for the wounded in battle.

A side-car containing an ambulance stretcher is attached to the machine, the said stretcher being removable so that it can be taken to any part of the field of battle. Much time is saved by using this conveyance, as it can be driven to many places that an automobile cannot penetrate, and much more ground can be covered in less time than a wagon or a corps of men afoot could do.

Appearances Deceptive.

Whilst making his usual daily inspection of the stables the colonel noticed Private Jones giving his horse a piece of lump sugar.

"I am very pleased to see you making much of your horse, Private Jones," he said; "it shows that you regard him with the true spirit, and I will not forget you for it."

Private Jones waited until his commanding officer was out of earshot, and then turned to his neighbor.

"I wasn't making much of him," he said. "The blighter threw me off this morning, and I'm trying to give him the blinkin' toothache."

NINE-YEARS AFTER CELEBRATED IN S.F.

Market Street Jammed as Long Pageant Moves Toward Jewel City Celebration

San Francisco.—Nine years ago there was a parade in San Francisco that jammed the streets, until the streets grew hot, and the flames on every side drove the paraders into other channels.

April 18 Market street was again jammed, as it was nine years ago, at the same hour—10 o'clock in the morning. But there was this difference: Nine years ago there were no spectators. Everybody paraded. And that parade was a silent one. There were no banners. There were no bands. There was no music, other than the blasts of dynamite and the crackling of flames.

When the nine-year-after pageant began to move toward Jewel City it was just in the opposite direction of that other silent parade. And on either side stood the joyous throng, with most of whom the memories of nine years ago gave a ring of sincerity to their shouts, that swelled into a thunderous roll of triumph.

Sirens shrieked, the gongs of street cars clanged and the music of bands measured the tread for the marching thousands. Military companies followed the lead of their flaunting banners.

All along the line of march merchants had prepared for the event by gaily decorating their places of business, and flags, bunting and streamers were everywhere in evidence, adding a carnival aspect to the scene.

A feature of the parade was the presence of thirty of the most beuatiful girl pupils of the Oriental School, in charge of Mrs. Newhall, the principal. These girls, dressed in their gayest Oriental raiment, rode on one of the white Fagdi trains which ply the avenues of the Exposition and was preceded by a band of Chinese boy musicians.

In the same division with these sons and daughters of the Far East were representatives of virtually every Zone concession. Among these were a full turnout from the 101 ranch, representatives from the Streets of Cairo, Toyland, the '49 Camp, Japan Beautiful, London to the South Pole, the prettiest maids from the Hawaiian Village and a band of natives from the Samoan Village.

Under direction of Colonel Stephen A. Foot, the army and navy forces from the vicinity of San Francisco marched in brave array and the martial music from several military and naval bands did much to add the touch of enthusiasm to the parade.

At the Exposition grounds the parade passed the reviewing stand and then countermarched back over the Zone, the representatives of the concessions to return to their work and the balance of the great aggregation to enjoy the sights of the Exposition.

GOLDROCKER LEADS TO ARREST AT FAIR

Apparently Innocent Exhibit at Exposition Excites Suspicion of Secret Service Men

San Francisco.—An apparently innocent exhibit of a gold rocker and washer in the Oregon building at the exposition attracted enough interest from United States Secret Service officers to result in the arrest of three heavily armed men and a complete counterfeiting outfit on the sloop Barnacle lying off Sausalito Thursday morning, April 15.

The machine, which was being operated daily by two of the alleged counterfeiters, W. H. Wilson and D. M. Poste, was on exhibition to demonstrate a process for saving fine gold from black sand. Wilson and Poste had even been washing sand from Ingleside in which, it is said, they declared they had found gold.

Before the Barnacle left the harbor of Coos Bay, northern secret service men had been watching the machine and its operations, as they suspected it was designed for the manufacture of "synthetic gold," a combination of metals and alloys which resembles gold.

Therefore, when the little thirty-seven-foot boat pulled into the harbor about five weeks ago, local secret service men were advised to keep the sloop and her crew under surveillance.

Secret Service Agents Harry M. Moffitt and Isidore Costanzo, accompanied by Detectives George Richards and Henry Kulmbach, made the raid. They left the Clay street wharf on the police boat Patrol at 5 o'clock. At 5:30 the launch crept alongside the Barnacle. While the detectives kept guard to prevent the escape of the men by the dingy, Moffitt and Costanzo boarded the sloop, dashed down the gangway to the men's bunking place aft and before the sleepers could wake up and get their weapons, smashed in the door and covered all of them with revolvers.

The detectives were summoned to the cabin and the secret service men gathered up all the evidence of the illegal money making that was about to begin. Near the improvised furnace in the galley were found molds, copper, brass and metals of various sorts, and fine clay for making molds. No counterfeits had been turned out. According to Moffitt, five-dollar coins were to have been made.

Claude Kelly, pastor of the First Baptist Church of this city, who was accused of making improper advances to Miss Eva Catton, daughter of a deacon of the church, were voiced by the congregation April 15. According to the warrant now in the hands of the local authorities, Tolar forged the firm name to a check for $25 and cashed it in a local bank just before his departure on his honeymoon with wife No. 3, Miss Ida M. Hamilton, a pretty high school girl of Fresno.

PRESS EXPRESSES ANGER OF PEOPLE

Netherlands Government Deeply Concerned Over Torpedoing of Wheat Laden Ship

London.—Although it is not yet certain that a German submarine boat was responsible for the sending to the bottom of the Dutch steamer Katwyk off the North Hinder lightship April 14, the sinking of the vessel has aroused the indignation of the Dutch people, as evidenced by the editorials of the newspapers in Holland.

The Katwyk, which was loaded with grain from Baltimore consigned to the Dutch government, is reported to have been lying at anchor at the time of the explosion and to have been flying the Dutch flag.

A dispatch to Reuter's from Flushing reports the arrival there of the crew of the Katwyk. The men say that while the night watch was being changed a severe shock was felt and the ship began to take in water. As the steamer was sinking the crew took to the boats and while rowing away saw the periscope of a submarine, which quickly disappeared.

The Katwyk sank fifteen minutes after the explosion.

Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent says the Katwyk had been lying at anchor for fifteen minutes when she was torpedoed on the port side. The correspondent says a message received from the Hook of Holland declares that all the ship's lights were burning at the time of the attack. After the torpedo struck the Katwyk caught fire and only the ship's papers could be saved.

LIBERTY BELL WILL BE SENT TO EXPOSITION

Philadelphia Councils Decide to Let Historic Relic Come After July Fourth

Philadelphia.—Select and Common Councils April 15 decided to allow the liberty bell to be sent to the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Resolutions providing for its trip across the continent were unanimously adopted by both branches.

Mayor Blankenburg has announced that he would sign the resolution, and only minor details now remain to complete the arrangements.

The bell cannot go until after July 4th, as it is to be made the feature of a great Independence day celebration in Philadelphia.

STORM SAVED BURNING SHIP

Waves, Breaking Over Abandoned Craft, Extinguished the Blazing Benzine.

A strange shipwreck story, unreported by cable from the Azores, arrived at New York from Horta, Fayal, by the Holland-America freighter Zaandyk, which was forced to put into this port by heavy weather that reduced her coal supply. Captain Barendsen says he learned from the skipper of the Norwegian tank steamship La Habra, which arrived at Horta on February 7, bound from Talara bay, Peru, by way of the Panama canal, for London, that her cargo of benzine caused an explosion aboard as she was nearing the Azores to replenish her bunkers.

La Habra was quickly ablaze from stem to stern. About half of the crew were on the forward part of the tank and the other half aft. Fearing that the falls and other boat gear would be burned, the tank's skipper ordered all hands to leave her in lifeboats and stand by. The engines had been stopped and La Habra drifted into the trough and, as she was deeply laden, the seas, which were very high, washed over her.

The chief officer and five men were in a boat towing astern when the hatches of the tank were blown off and cataracts of blazing benzine shot over her sides and stern. The boat's painter was burned off and the chief officer and his men went drifting down the blast, being without oars or sail, and disappeared. The other boats were threatened with destruction by the burning benzine, which spread out all around La Habra, making her look like a fire ship in a lake of flame.

The skipper of the tank expected her to be destroyed utterly before his eyes. He was elated when a giant comber broke around her, dousing the fire almost completely. Other seas helped in the work, and all hands except the chief officer and those in the vanished boat went back on their ship. They found that all charts, books and instruments of navigation had been destroyed.

April 16 was the Oakland school children's day at the Exposition. More than a thousand children frem the Oakland Elementary schools came to the Exposition early in the morning and spent the time until noon in visiting the various exhibit palaces.

ZEPPELINS SHELLING AT LONDON'S GATES

Giant Destroyers Drop Bombs on Several Towns Thirty Miles From Metropolis

Berlin.—An official statement April 17 declares a German aviator has shelled Greenwich, within the London metropolitan district and five miles below London Bridge, the site of the College for the Royal Navy and of the Royal Observatory.

Rome.—An Austrian frontier patrol is said to have crossed the Italian frontier and to have exchanged revolver shots with the Italian frontier guards.

The ministry is not acquainted with the details yet, but will publish an official communication as soon as it receives a report from the local authorities.

Paris.—The belief is becoming general in Rome that Austria will make a sudden attack upon Italy as soon as she becomes convinced that the latter country has determined to intervene in the war, according to a dispatch to the Matin.

This prospect is said to be causing no alarm, however, because of the concentration of large forces of Italian troops on the Austrian frontier.

Drastic steps are being taken by the Italian government to prevent trade in contraband articles being carried on with Austria, according to the newspaper Secolo of Milan.

It says 500 persons were arrested on Friday while attempting to smuggle flour, rice and spaghetti across the frontier.

London.—Two Zeppelin airships visited the east coast of England shortly after midnight, April 16, dropping bombs on several towns, doing considerable damage to property. As far as has been ascertained only one person, a woman, was injured. It is said she was only slightly hurt.

The airships dropped four bombs on Malden, in Essex county, 30 miles northeast of London, but no damage resulted. Bombs also were dropped in the Heybridge basin, two miles across the river. These set fire to some buildings. The airships came up the Blackwater river and over the marshes and circled.

At Lowestoft, on the North Sea in Suffolk county, three bombs were dropped, considerable damage resulting to house property in the center of the town. A lumber yard also was set on fire. The window panes in many houses were shattered. Three horses belonging to the railway company were killed.

Previously the air craft had visited Southwold, twelve miles south of Lowestoft, and having missed striking that town with its missiles went on to Halesworth, eight miles inland. It then returned again to Southwold and dropped six bombs.

According to the latest accounts, after leaving Lowestoft, the air craft passed over Harwich in the direction of Felixtown. It is said now that a dozen bombs were dropped in Maldon but that only one building, a workshop in the London road, was struck.

Anti-air craft guns were heard during the night at Gravesend and Sherness. The authorities had ample warning of the air raid, as Dutch telegrams reported that Zeppelins were coming across the sea in the direction of England. Notices were sent to the police authorities of some of the east and south coast towns of possible aerial visitors. These notices enabled the usual precautions to forestall air attacks to be taken in towns and villages.

No accounts of the actual damage done by the bombs of the air craft is obtainable as yet, the raid having occurred at such a late hour of the night.

AGED MASON GUEST OF HONOR AT A BANQUET

San Rafael—Masons from throughout Marin county gathered in Masonic Hall Wednesday night, April 14, to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of J. S. Kaneen's membership in that order. Kaneen, although 86 years old, responded to a toast and danced a few steps, just to show some of the younger generation that he is still spry.

Kaneen became a master Mason in Buffalo, N. Y., on April 15, 1865, and four years later became a Royal Arch Mason and a Knight Templar.

NEW AND BUILT FOR YOU

Remington JUNIOR Typewriter

HERE is the typewriter for which you have been waiting. Here is a first-class typewriter, a genuine Remington Typewriter product, carrying the iron-clad Remington guarantee, and embodying just the qualities you need.

You need a typewriter. Everybody needs one. The time saved and the labor saved by the writing machine is worth saving by you and by everyone who has writing to do. Consider all that it means to you to own and use a typewriter—all the advantages and all the economies.

Typewriting is from two to three times faster than the swiftest pen writing.

Typewriting is easier and less fatiguing than pen writing. Back-ache and finger-cramp are unknown to the typewriter operator.

Typewriting looks better than pen writing—even the best pen writing. It is neater, more compact, more legible.

Typewriting is the accepted mode of business writing. We all have business letters to write and we all want our letters to look business-like.

Typewriting is the systematic method of writing. It enables you to take carbon copies of everything you write—as many as you like. You can keep copies of all your correspondence, and file these copies for future reference, which is impossible when you write with a pen.

Typewriting is a fine accomplishment. A typewriter in your home is not only an educator for your children, but the skill they attain in its use may be a money-maker for them in years to come.

ALL of these advantages are yours for the taking, if you buy a Remington Junior Typewriter.

The Remington Junior is a Remington Typewriter. There is only one grade in Remington construction—the best; and in every detail of design, material and workmanship the Remington Junior is a true Remington product. It is durable, reliable, easy to learn, easy to operate, speedy in action and no finer or more beautiful typewriting is possible on a writing machine.

The price of the Remington Junior is $50.00, cash with order. It differs from the standard hundred-dollar Remington only in these points: It is smaller, it is lighter, with fewer parts, it is designed for the simpler uses, such as manuscript and letter-writing. But for these purposes it has no superior. It represents what every present-day Remington represents—the highest standard of efficiency ever attained in a writing machine.

Here then is your opportunity—your first opportunity—to buy an absolutely first-grade typewriter at a low price. Better seize the opportunity and buy now. You need not wait to buy until you get all the money, for we have arranged special easy terms of payment.

For $25.00 we will sell you a Remington Junior on terms of $5.00 down and $5.00 a month.

Send us $5.00 in cash, check or money order, and we will send the machine. If you wish to return it within ten days after you get it, you may do so, and we will refund the $5.00, less cost of transportation.

This is your chance to get a typewriter of exceptional value on exceptional terms. Cut out the attached coupon and send it now.

Madewell Surface Pipe

WHY SURFACE PIPE?

Because it saves land.
Because it saves water.
Because it saves time, labor, money.

The ditch system was good enough once—but with land and water worth several hundred per cent more than they were a few years ago— the waste can no longer be tolerated. Hence, irrigators generally are adopting the use of surface irrigation pipe.

..Madewell Surface Pipe ends the loss of water by seepage and evaporation.

Madewell Surace Pipe enables. the grower to use all his land; ditches are no longer necessary.

Madewell Surface Pipe removes the need of expensive grading and leveling.

.Madewell Surface Pipe makes it possible to carry water to any deisred location—it reaches the high points as well as the depressions.

HOW USED.

The pipe can be laid outward from the source of water, pieces being added as required; or it can b elaid to the farthest point first and removed piece by piece back toward the source.

A GOOD CHARACTER AFTER ALL

We quote the following from a l ttle announcement by the Bank of Morgan Hill, California, as being good reading:

"Some one has advanced the opinion that the letter "e" is the most unfortunate character in the English alphabet, because it is always out of Cash, forever in Debt, never out of Danger and in Hell all the time. For some reason he overlooked the fortunates of the letter, and we call his attention to the fact that the letter "e" is never in War and always in Peace. It is the beginning of Existence, the commencement of Ease, and the end of Trouble. Without it there would be no Meat, no Life, no Heaven. It is the center of Honesty, makes Love perfect and without it there would be no Money, no Deposit, no Interest and no Dividends. It must also be used in Reserve. It is always in Courtesy, must be used in Politeness and is necessary to Service.

TOM A. CORBETT IS DEAD

Thomas A. Corbett, gentleman sportsman and brother of James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion of the world, died at his home, 1414 Sixth avenue, yesterday afternoon, following a nine-day' siege of pleurisy. Corbett was stricken so low last Sunday that Dr. John W. Gallowey was called and placed in constant attendance.

Corbett, who was 37 years old, was born in Hays valley, being the youngest of six boys in a fmaily of eleven children. The most famed brother of "Tom" as he was familiarly known to a large circle of friends, was James J., probably the greatest knight of the squared circle in the history of sports has there been a boxer as idolized as "Gentleman Jim," the San Francisco lad who bested the mighty John L. Sullivan.

Another star of the athletic firmament was Joe Corbett, who, when the famous Baltimore Orioles were at their zenith,was their star pitcher. His brothers, Frank and Johnny are both well known in the sporting world, while his brother Harry, now dead, occupied, before Tom, the position that the latter occupied at the time of his death.

Tom and Harry are reported as being the greatest bookmakers ever seen in the west. At the time that Fickert defeated Heney for district attorney for San Francisco, Tom handled more than $100,000 on the outcome.

Corbett is survived by a widow and two children, Katherine, aged 4, and Margaret, 2.
